

Mets to the spine

Granica4818•

1 day ago•31 Replies

Has anyone ever had Mets to the spine? Pain? My husband's pain is getting to be unbearable even with meds. He finished 5 treatments of radiation two weeks ago and starts steroids today. My other question is will the pain get better? And how long until it does? Is there ever surgery to remove the tumor? Thank you for any input. PSA two weeks after radiation was 0.03 will check again in two weeks to see if systemic treatment will be started.

daleboy31 1 day ago

Hello, the reason I am responding to your request regarding pain is that I used a enzyme named Serrapeptase it's a enzyme from the Japanese silk worm that dissolves it's cocoon to enter into the world using the enzyme Serrapeptase 80,000 iu as this Enzyme when swallowed in capsule form, travels throughout the body digesting all dead tissues cleaning the arteries in its path & when it "entered my enlarged prostate I could feel it working & digesting the inflammation within it "shortly after the pains were reduced by 60 to 70% so I am going to suggest your husband buys Serrapeptase the strength of 80,000 iu. the iu stands for international units "If taken once in the morning & once at night until pain subsides" then keep them until required for pain but as I stated earlier it reduces inflammation that causes the pain, you can buy these online, I hope this helps you, let me know how you get on please 🙏

Miomarito in reply to daleboy35 hours ago

This is what jim uses. He has Mets to spine, no pain and able to work. This brand is an excellent brand called double wood. Good luck dale!

Double Wood Brand.